William Hinsler, a pioneer of 1847, died in San Francisco yesterday.

THE RAILROAD COUPON CASES.

Whoever has read the decision of the Superior Court of this county in the railroad bond coupon cases must, if dispassionate and just, conclude that the law is correctly interpreted therein.

The fact, however, does not prevent the rabid press from assailing the Court that rendered the judgment. It is another manifestation of the mania which afflicts a portion of the press.

When the action was brought, the anti-railroad maniacs at once assumed that the coupon holders must be defeated.

It was not deemed necessary to examine into the facts—it was sufficient to know that indirectly the railroad was related to the issue for the howlers to conclude that judgment, right or wrong, must accord with their vicious ideas of justice.

Now, there could be only one outcome to the action—it goes to the Supreme Court at once, and we venture the prophecy that that tribunal will be unanimous in affirming the judgment. But it is not probable that the Court below will thereby be righted by the hyenas which have assailed it, notwithstanding that the Judge who sat in the case passed upon it as a cold matter of law, and has not given ground for the assault made upon him. Subserviency on his part to the assumed popular clamor which demagogues "whoo up" so diligently would have made him a most wise Judge, in their estimation, but the law would have remained just the same. It was a very simple case. The State guaranteed the payment of interest on bonds issued by a railroad company in 1864. For that consideration the company contracted with the State to do it certain service forever—that is to say, during its existence. The contract provided that if the corporation failed in any respect to comply with its agreement, the State should sue and recover back from it all the interest paid out. Obviously, by this very provision the payment of interest was independent of and not dependent upon performance on the part of the corporation. The purpose was to give value to the bonds, but it will be apparent to the dullest intelligence that no such credit value would have been conferred whatever it, if depended upon the continuing conditions. That is to say, no man would have put money into such bonds if he knew that the security given by the State's indorsement as to interest could be rendered of no value. This we pointed out a year ago when the matter first came up, and when an action was brought against the company to recover back the State the interest paid, on an allegation of violation of the contract. Yet on the heels of this complaint—and which has just been defeated on demurrer in a San Francisco court—the State refused to pay interest imposed held by third parties. We however, if ever, the State brings the first action to trial, it will probably develop that the compact has not been violated, for the corporation people would be more than fools to render themselves liable for a large sum of money by refusing to carry out the provisions of the contract, which certain State messengers to be transported free, and certain grants to the tribunals where they invoke justice and receive it.

THE OUTLOOK FOR CONGRESSIONAL AID.

It is said that Congress never reaches for action more than eight per cent. of the business brought before it. Out of some 10,000 bills, resolutions and petitions what chance have we, the people of a remote section—a mere drop in the great ocean of struggling interests—of securing a hearing on the important question of the preservation of the river? Not much, it must be confessed. But for that very reason we should be the louder in our cry. To wait until the next Congress will not be the matter a particle. We should make up and forward our preamble of facts and petition for relief at once. It is probable that our delegation may be able to receive from the proper department such attention as will justify a recommendation of inquiry at least, and that can probably be gotten through the present Congress, even if no direct appropriation can be had.

Whoever has read the decision of the Superior Court of this county in the railroad bond coupon cases must, if dispassionate and just, conclude that the law is correctly interpreted therein.

The fact, however, does not prevent the rabid press from assailing the Court that rendered the judgment. It is another manifestation of the mania which afflicts a portion of the press.

When the action was brought, the anti-railroad maniacs at once assumed that the coupon holders must be defeated.

It was not deemed necessary to examine into the facts—it was sufficient to know that indirectly the railroad was related to the issue for the howlers to conclude that judgment, right or wrong, must accord with their vicious ideas of justice.

Now, there could be only one outcome to the action—it goes to the Supreme Court at once, and we venture the prophecy that that tribunal will be unanimous in affirming the judgment. But it is not probable that the Court below will thereby be righted by the hyenas which have assailed it, notwithstanding that the Judge who sat in the case passed upon it as a cold matter of law, and has not given ground for the assault made upon him. Subserviency on his part to the assumed popular clamor which demagogues "whoo up" so diligently would have made him a most wise Judge, in their estimation, but the law would have remained just the same. It was a very simple case. The State guaranteed the payment of interest on bonds issued by a railroad company in 1864. For that consideration the company contracted with the State to do it certain service forever—that is to say, during its existence. The contract provided that if the corporation failed in any respect to comply with its agreement, the State should sue and recover back from it all the interest paid out. Obviously, by this very provision the payment of interest was independent of and not dependent upon performance on the part of the corporation. The purpose was to give value to the bonds, but it will be apparent to the dullest intelligence that no such credit value would have been conferred whatever it, if depended upon the continuing conditions. That is to say, no man would have put money into such bonds if he knew that the security given by the State's indorsement as to interest could be rendered of no value. This we pointed out a year ago when the matter first came up, and when an action was brought against the company to recover back the State the interest paid, on an allegation of violation of the contract. Yet on the heels of this complaint—and which has just been defeated on demurrer in a San Francisco court—the State refused to pay interest imposed held by third parties. We however, if ever, the State brings the first action to trial, it will probably develop that the compact has not been violated, for the corporation people would be more than fools to render themselves liable for a large sum of money by refusing to carry out the provisions of the contract, which certain State messengers to be transported free, and certain grants to the tribunals where they invoke justice and receive it.

THE OUTLOOK FOR CONGRESSIONAL AID.

It is said that Congress never reaches for action more than eight per cent. of the business brought before it.
